

Dear Nana,

I have written to you many times, but always with caution. I hope that this will come into your hands, and therefore I shall write a little more freely.

First of all I want to advise you to be much more prudent and limited in your correspondence with everyone, no matter whom.

It seems to me that the time is not yet right for free action. In any case I will let you know, although probably you will also be able to know by yourself.

You must be very careful in all things.

I am in contact with all the missionaries, as with KOLE, OJON, etc. You must know that I am under the control of the authorities, although their attitude seems very indifferent. KOLE will write to you at greater length.

Affectionately, your

NIKOLLI
